CRIMINAL DEFENSE INVESTIGATORS

The very nature of a criminal defense investigation is primarily one of opposites.....

..... the professional Private Investigator knows and understands that although their relationship with the state (police and prosecutors) is an adversarial one in theory, acknowledging and accepting each others functions as part of the 'check and balance' process, is what helps to make our legal system a fair and effective process.

Just as some lawyers choose to practice on the prosecution side of the aisle, and other lawyers choose to practice on the defense side of that very same aisle.....

..... the same with professional Private Investigators practicing criminal defense.

Some investigators choose to enter the police academy and undergo in excess of 720 hrs (WA state) in basic training, followed by approximately another year of supervised 'on the job training' with an experienced officer, then climb the ranks to a detective/investigator position.....

.....while others (many with police and military backgrounds) choose to enter the world of the professional Private Investigator.

This is where the best criminal defense investigators are trained and developed.

As a well known criminal defense investigator, with over 25 years experience in two countries, I have a great deal of respect and empathy with the difficult and thankless job that law enforcement everywhere is tasked with.

But by continuing to work professionally and effectively with each other, I believe we will all overcome the difficulties and challenges facing us today, and continue to grow and improve as individuals, and as a society.

Be safe and respectful out there,
Neil Harrison CAI CPI
