NEW PROCEDURES MANUAL SECTION

23.31 JUVENILE COMPLAINANT

If a very young child reports criminal conduct, case law requires further investigation and at least some corroboration to establish reliability of the child's statements.

In particular, if a minor makes a statement to an officer that he/she was molested, the minor's statements alone will not be sufficiently reliable for probable cause to detain the suspect for an interview. If an officer is taking a statement from a minor and there are indications that the minor's ability to know what happened or remember correctly or know what happened was wrong are not present, do not detain or otherwise seize a suspect for questioning. Either corroborate the child's statement or attempt to get a voluntary statement from the suspect.
